At the outset let me thank all members of the Society who have whole heartedly supported my candidature for the post of Secretary, ISEG. I am indeed overwhelmed by trust and faith reposed by senior members of the society. I am aware that this position has been occupied by many luminaries in the past and also fully sentient of the responsibility that comes with the same.

Let me assure all members that and geotechnical fraternity at large that we shall leave no stone unturned in preserving the highest traditions of this great institution which has completed fifty years of glorious service to the nation and to engineering geology. The new council welcomes all geology, engineering and science graduates who are working in engineering geology or any of the related areas to come and join the society. It may be noted that during the recently conducted EGNM 2015 papers were received not only in conventional engineering geology but in several other areas such as soil mechanics, rock mechanics, water quality, sedimentation, rainfall induced landslides, environmental aspects and mining. Such diverse topics are welcome and increase the scope and reach of our society.

This Council has a difficult job to do as it has to emulate the previous team which put in a lot of hard work and a stamp of class. However, with a strong team from various organizations and under the leadership of Shri R.N. Mishra, President, ISEG we shall strive to achieve highest standard of working and work towards goals set forth in the first council meeting.

With these words I once again welcome and encourage young science and engineering graduates well as experienced and learned professionals, scientists and academicians to come forward and join the society.

With regards
